

Issue International Business Courts – Erasmus Law Review

The latest issue of Erasmus Law Review, edited by Xandra Kramer and John Sorabji, is dedicated to International Business Courts. It contains eleven papers focusing on a specific jurisdiction or on horizontal issues, including on international jurisdiction and lawyers' preferences in international litigation. The Introductory paper by the editors frames the discussion on international business courts, provides explanations for the rise of these courts in Europe and beyond, addresses aspects of justice innovation and international competition, as well as the effect these new courts may have on globalising commercial court litigation.

This issue of Erasmus Law Review results from the seminar 'Innovating International Business Courts: a European Outlook' hosted by the Erasmus School of Law in Rotterdam, held on 10 July 2018, and coorganised by the Max Planck Institute for Procedural Law in Luxembourg and the Montaigne Centre for Rule of Law and Administration of Justice of Utrecht University. It includes the speaker contributions to that seminar and additional articles resulting from a call for papers on this blog. The complete issue can be downloaded here. The table of contents is at the bottom of this post.

Simultaneously a book expanding on the topic and including views from twelve jurisdictions has just been published: International Business Courts: A European and Global Perspective (eds. Xandra Kramer & John Sorabji), Eleven International Publishing 2019. (order form) The electronic version of this book will become available open access soon.

These publications result from and are financed by the ERC

Consolidator project Building EU Civil Justice at the Erasmus School of Law in Rotterdam.
