

Singapore and Fiji ratify the Singapore Convention on Mediation

Singapore and Fiji have each deposited instruments of ratification at the UN Headquarters on 25 February 2020. The UN Convention on International Settlement Agreements Resulting from Mediation (“Singapore Convention on Mediation”) facilitates the cross-border enforcement of international commercial settlement agreements reached through mediation (see previous post here). To date, fifty-two States have signed the Convention. It will enter into force six months after the deposit of three instruments of ratification. The list of signatory States may be found here.
