

6th CPLJ Webinar - 2 July 2021

Comparative Procedural Law and Justice (CPLJ) is a global project of the Max Planck Institute Luxembourg for Procedural Law, with the support of the Luxembourg National Research Fund (019/13946847), involving more than one hundred scholars from all over the world.

CPLJ is envisioned as a comprehensive study of comparative civil procedural law and civil dispute resolution schemes in the contemporary world. It aims at understanding procedural rules in their cultural context, as well as at highlighting workable approaches to the resolution of civil disputes.

In this framework, the Max Planck Institute Luxembourg for Procedural Law will host its 6th CPLJ Webinar on 2 July 2021, 3:00 - 5:15 pm (CEST).

The programme reads as follows:

Chair: Loïc Cadiet (University of Paris I Panthéon-Sorbonne)

3:00 pm Bruno Deffains (University of Paris II Panthéon-Assas / University Institute of France)

Comparative procedural law and economics

3:30 pm Discussion

4:00 pm Intermission

4:15 pm Remco van Rhee (Maastricht University)

*The use of foreign models of civil procedure in national law reform:
'Lessons' from History?*

4:45 pm Discussion

5:15 pm End of conference

The full programme is available here.

Participation is free of charge, but registration is required by 29 June 2021 via a short e-mail to events@mpi.lu.

(Image credits: Rijksmuseum, Amsterdam)