German professors comment on the Commission Proposal for a Regulation on Parenthood

Discussion on the Commission Proposal for a Regulation on Parenthood is intensifying – recall the virtual workshop by Tobias Helms in February and the current regular webinars on the proposal. Now, a group of German professors (including Helms) that calls itself "the Marburg group" has published critical comments. Their verdict: "The Marburg Group welcomes the initiative of the Commission. The Group embraces the overall structure of the Parenthood Proposal. Nevertheless, it suggests some fundamental changes, apart from technical amendments."

For details, see here.