

Third Issue of the Lloyd's Maritime and Commercial Law Quarterly for 2024

The third issue of the Lloyd's Maritime and Commercial Law Quarterly was recently released. It contains the following article, case note and book reviews:

Adrian Briggs, "The Hague 2019 Convention"

The Hague Convention on the Recognition and Enforcement of Judgments in Civil and Commercial Matters 2019 will come into force for the United Kingdom on 1 July 2025. It will represent the principal means for the mutual recognition of judgments between the United Kingdom and the European Union (and any other states adopting it), and it is for this reason timely to examine the instrument which will replace, but certainly not replicate, Chapter III of the Brussels I Regulation. In discussing the structure and detail of the Convention, it is noticeable how far it falls short of the pre-existing regime.

Pau S Davies and Katherine Ratcliffe, "Anti-Arbitration Injunctions and Stays to Arbitration"

Andrew Tettenborn, "Book Review - The 2019 Hague Judgments Convention"

Adrian Briggs, "Book Review - Governing Law Risks in International Business Transactions"