

Recent report on the Netherlands Commercial Court

Readers of this blog who are keen on the theme of commercial courts might be interested in the recent report 'An interim assessment during the start-up phase of the Netherlands Commercial Court (NCC)'. This document is authored by T. Geurts, Y.N. Overvelde & M.P.C. Scheepmaker. The authors conducted an empirical study for the Research and Data Centre (WODC), an independent knowledge agency of the Dutch Ministry of Justice and Security.

Along with the full report in Dutch, a summary in English and a helpful accompanying post are available online.

The report provides several insights, including information on the NCC's caseload in the past years, the countries where the litigating parties were domiciled, and the legal practitioners' familiarity with the NCC's work. Furthermore, the authors reflect on the future perspectives of the NCC.

Earlier posts on commercial posts are available here, with further links.