Call for Papers: “American Law in Transformation”, Revue libre de Droit, Volume 14 (2027)

The Revue libre de Droit (ISSN 2276-5328), a peer-reviewed, open-access law review published in France since 2014, invites articles, essays, case comments and book reviews on American law, in English or in French, for a thematic dossier to be published in Volume 14 (2027).

Suggested themes include constitutional law and the Supreme Court; the administrative state after Loper Bright; technology, artificial intelligence and data; corporate, securities and financial law; extraterritoriality and international economic law; taxation; comparative and transatlantic perspectives; and legal theory, history and education. Proposals on any other area of American law are welcome. Co-authored pieces bringing together American and French-speaking authors are especially encouraged.

Formats: articles (8,000–15,000 words), essays and case comments (3,000–6,000 words), book reviews (1,500–3,000 words).

Key dates:
– 31 January 2027: optional abstract (300–500 words) for early feedback
– 31 March 2027: deadline for full manuscripts

Double-blind peer review, with a decision usually within one week to one month. Open access under CC BY 4.0, with no fees; authors keep their copyright.

Submissions: contact@revue-libre-de-droit.fr (subject line “Call for papers – American law”) or via Scholastica: https://revuelibrededroit.scholasticahq.com/for-authors

Full call: https://revue-libre-de-droit.fr/call-for-papers-american-law